Resurrection

Joyce Rupp

An unknown Iowa pasture,
Two black figures in the dawn,
One large, one very small,
So small as to almost not be seen,
Hidden in the fresh folds
Of unblemished April grass.

A mother cow gives birth
Leans down, nudges her child,
Helps his wobbly legs to stand,
Licks away the womb's silk
And offer the fullness of her udder.

Everyday, somewhere,
A new creation.

Everyday, somewhere,
A new life marked with splendour,
Leaving behind the unwrapped linens
Of an empty womb.
